

better TOGETHER

help shape the future of mental health, AOD and suicide prevention services in eastern and north eastern Melbourne

Overview

Services can thrive when they are shaped by the people who use them

Redpanther - a lived experience consultancy - has been commissioned by EMPHN to lead the co-design process to inform how people with lived experience can shape mental health and AOD services in our community.

This engagement will take place between September 2019 and mid 2020

How to get involved

1. Organisations

We are interested to know how lived experience and peer work are being used to shape your organisation and services through design, development and evaluation. The focus will be on the challenges and opportunities you encounter and ideas for improvements.

2. Individuals and Carers / Families

We are interested in finding out about your experience in shaping mental health and AOD services through design, development and evaluation, such as involvement in committees or projects.

We will explore where lived experience is effectively influencing service design and delivery, how this can be strengthened, as well as what could be improved and how.

3. Subject Matter Experts

We will work with other subject matter experts to help us gather best-practice evidence and examples.

Project Goal

Develop an approach to incorporate lived experience in design, development, implementation and evaluation of services in our community, informed by a review of current practices.
